THE MENTOR NEWS

ISSN 1708-9034
February 10, 2009

This newsletter is being sent to you because you let the mentoring experts at Peer Resources know about your interest in mentorship. We strongly support a privacy policy that prohibits sending unwanted email. If you wish your address to be removed from this list, please let us know. We do not sell or forward your address to any other source. Back issues of The Mentor News are now available online at <http://www.mentors.ca/thementornews.html>

As a special offer for subscribers to The Mentor News we are providing access to our premium newsletter The Peer Bulletin instead of The Mentor News, which would have been sent today. Normally the Peer Bulletin is only available to members of the Peer Resources Network, and this substitution is only available for access until February 28th.

We are making this offer to encourage Mentor News subscribers to become members of the Peer Resources Network. We hope that a sample of this premium newsletter, which is distributed every month, will demonstrate the value of membership in the Peer Resources Network. Details about the services, benefits, and fees of the Peer Resources Network are available at <http://www.mentors.ca/PRN.html>

The special substitute issue of The Mentor News can be viewed at <http://www.peer.ca/Bulletin173MN-1.html>

Here is a summary of the content for this issue:

Articles:

- Proven Learning Tool Strengthens Mentoring Progress -- Rey Carr
Learning from experience is often acknowledged as the most successful way to grow and develop, and this article reveals the specific steps associated with applying an experiential approach in mentoring, peer assistance, and coaching relationships.
- Increase the Power of Coaching by Understanding Its History -- Bill Dueease
The history of coaching has recently been documented in a comprehensive fashion. One of the pioneers of the industry details some of the historical elements and makes a case for returning to the roots.
- Does Technology Improve Mentoring Outcomes? -- Rey Carr
More than a dozen companies compete in the mentoring marketplace to provide a mentoring relationship management system that can be customized to fit almost any mentoring program. Do they work?
- Peer Training Seminar Connects African and North American Indigenous Cultures -- Nomalungelo Ntlokwana
A participant in a recent Peer Resources training seminar describes her experience and how she is using what she learned to make a difference at her university in South Africa.
