VICTORIA, BRITISH COLUMBIA, February 10, 2003 Peer Resources, the global authority on mentoring, coaching and peer assistance has created the Internet's largest list of who mentored who. Available at www.mentors.ca this list includes famous mentor pairs from the entertainment industry, sports, the arts, journalism, history, politics, and business. In just one place you can find out who mentored Kevin Spacey, Condolezza Rice, Cal Ripken, Pamela Wallin, Micheal Eisner, Maria Callas, Igor Stavinsky, Susan B. Anthony, Bill Clinton and hundreds of others, including mentor pairs depicted in fiction, on TV and in the movies.

With the announcement by President George W. Bush in his 2003 State of the Union address that he was recommending that $US450 million be allocated to mentoring youth, attention to mentoring is likely to increase. Rey Carr, Ph.D., the Chief Mentor Coach with Peer Resources said, "Mentorship is a way to have a personal trainer for your goals, so we created this Famous Mentor Pairs list to provide easily identified role models that could act as a goal catalyst to both youth and potential mentors." Journalists preparing news items on mentoring can draw upon the researched mentor pairings to add historical or contemporary interest to their stories.

Also available at www.mentors.ca are tips on finding a mentor, a list of the key factors for successful mentoring, descriptions of hundreds of different type of mentoring programs and services, reviews of the best books in the mentoring field, and an opportunity to become a member of the Peer Resources Network and receive the most up-to-date information about mentoring.
